

TRACE32 Extension Development Kit (EDK) Licensing Terms and Conditions

1.Scope

You receive - or have received - the TRACE32 Extension Development Kit (referred to as 'EDK' in the rest of this document). The EDK contains files with information that is copyright by Lauterbach and some information confidential to Lauterbach, and you may use these EDK files only if you agree to be bound by these terms and conditions.

2.Terms and Conditions

By using any Lauterbach copyrighted/confidential file that is part of the EDK, you agree to these terms and conditions:

- a) The EDK and all of its individual components are provided 'as is'. Lauterbach explicitly excludes any liability resulting from use or knowledge of the EDK or any of its components.
- b) You will use the EDK only for internal evaluation, or for company-internal development and debugging purposes. If you learn about any other (unauthorized) use, you will inform Lauterbach as soon as possible about this.
- c) You disclose the EDK - either as a whole, or any of its individual components (e.g. source files, sample files, documentation, etc.) - only to employees of your company and to your contract partners who are also bound by these terms and conditions.
- d) You will report back to Lauterbach any additions or changes made to the EDK. Lauterbach may use and publish this information to third parties.

3.Termination

If you violate any of these conditions without prior explicit permission from Lauterbach, you automatically lose the right to use the EDK and any of its components or any derivative works, and Lauterbach has the option to claim for potential damages.

You can also destroy all copies of the EDK and of all information contained therein which you received in your company and at your contract partners to terminate this agreement.

4.Wrap-up clause

If any of these terms and conditions are invalid for whatever cause, all other terms and conditions shall still remain effective. The offending clause shall be replaced by the closest matching rule preserving the spirit of this agreement.